Miers Backed Abortion Ban

Nominee's views revealed in answers to 1989 questionnaire

WASHINGTON | Supreme Court nominee Harriet Miers pledged unflagging opposition to abortion as a candidate for the Dallas City Council in 1989, according to documents released Tuesday. She backed a constitutional amendment to ban the procedure in most cases and promised to appear at "pro-life rallies and special events."

Asked in a Texans United for Life questionnaire whether she would support legislation restricting abortions if the Supreme Court allowed it, Miers indicated she would. Her reply was the same when asked, "Will you oppose the use of city funds or facilities" to promote abortions?

Supporters of Miers' nomination said they hoped the single sheet of paper — delivered to the Senate Judiciary Committee as part of a shipment of 12 boxes of documents — would help reassure rebellious conservatives that she would not disappoint them if she took a seat on the high court.

Miers

President Bush knew of the views she had held before he picked her for the court, spokesman Scott McClellan said at the White House.

But he said the president "did not discuss with her or anyone else whether or not those were still her views."

One Democratic supporter of abortion rights responded warily. "This raises very serious concerns about her ability to fairly apply the law without bias in this regard," said Sen. Dianne Feinstein of California. "It will be my intention to question her very carefully about these issues." DAVID ESPO (AP)

CRIMINALS

Wasn't Hard to Pick It Out of a Lineup

Friday's arrest registry for the Monroe County, Fla., sheriff's office noted that "Juan Llama" has been arrested and charged with a misdemeanor for "loitering or prowling" at a high school. The offender certainly stood out in the collection of mug shots, considering "Juan Llama" is a stuffed toy llama, thesmokinggun.com reported. The arrest entry described Llama as 19 years old, with the occupation of "stuffed llama." The entry, included among those for people arrested for drug sales and probation violation, has since been removed; a police spokesperson said an employee was improperly "messing around" with the registry. ## WALKING

Path of Destruction

A Dundee, Scotland, woman was arrested earlier this year under new United Kingdom anti-terrorism laws — for walking on a cycling path, the Express reported. Sally Cameron said she often strolled to work on the path, but, one day in May, was told by a guard she could only bike the path. Before she knew it, the harbormaster also joined in, using a megaphone to order her to turn around. "I started laughing and kept on walking," Cameron said. Then police arrived and arrested her under the Terrorism Act—people walking the path are considered a security risk. "As if walkers and not cyclists were the only ones likely to plant bombs," Cameron said. (EXPRESS)

The 130-pound deer crashed through the front window of the store and ran amok for more than an hour before it was tranquilized by state game officials and taken out. No one was hurt. (EXPRESS)

Mi Casa Looks Like Su Casa

An Oveido, Fla., man was released from jail Tuesday after being charged with attacking his neighbor because of the color of the neighbor's house, WFTV-TV reported. Michael Dudley's house is tan with black trim, the same colors that neighbor Sam Awhal decided to use on his house. Dudley wasn't pleased with Awhal mimicking the color-scheme, police said; the two got into an argument and Dudley hit Awhal. The painter who Awhal had hired broke up the fight. "He got very upset ... literally attacked ... 'cause of black paint,'" said painter Steve Yaworski. (EXPRESS)

Miers Could Have Immediate Impact

Analysis: Nominee could swing abortion decisions right away

WASHINGTON | New revelations about Harriet Miers' views on abortion hint she would shift the Supreme Court away from abortion rights, more so than new Chief Justice John Roberts. The impact could be almost immediate.

If confirmed by the Senate, the 60-year-old who has never served as a judge would probably be thrust into a tie-breaking role on abortion cases — possibly in her first week.

While her vote would not be enough to overturn Roe v. Wade, President Bush's pick would play a crucial role in deciding how far states and the federal government can go to restrict abortions.

Conservative religious leaders contend they have received assurances that Miers opposes abortion, lower court said is unconstitutional because it lacks an exception allowing a minor to have an abortion to protect her health. That case also could determine the legal standard for challenges to abortion laws.

Also in late November the court may decide whether it will hear the Bush administration's appeal of a 2003 federal law that bans the type of late-term abortion known as partial-birth abortion. Lower courts have said the law is unconstitutional, because it lacks a health exception. GINA HOLLAND (AP)

NEW YORK Red Cross Admits Error in Data on Evacuees in Hotels

Conceding that its staff misinterpreted data, the American Red Cross said Tuesday that only about 200,000 Hurricane Katrina evacuees were now being housed in hotels and motels nationwide, not more than 600,000 as the agency reported last week. The Red Cross now calculates the cost of the motel program at $220 million to $250 million, instead of the $350 million to $425 million that was projected last week. (AP)

HURRICANE, W.VA. | With $340 million up for grabs in the second-biggest lottery jackpot in U.S. history, people trekked to a small-town West Virginia convenience store to buy their tickets Tuesday in the apparent belief that lightning can strike twice in the same place.

Nearly three years ago, it was the C&L Super Serve in Hurricane that sold the ticket that made West Virginia contractor Jack Whittaker the winner of the nation's biggest undivided jackpot: $314.9 million in the multi-state Powerball lottery.

Wednesday's Powerball jackpot climbed into the stratosphere after 20 straight drawings in which no one won the grand prize.

Florida Readies for Wilma

Forecasters say storm might aim for state's West Coast by weekend

PUNTA GORDA, FLA. | Having seen what Katrina and other storms have done in the past year or so, Floridians began buying water and canned goods Tuesday after watching Wilma strengthen into a hurricane.

Although the storm was not expected to approach Florida until the weekend, residents began buying supplies early. Many said they take every storm seriously now, after witnessing the devastation from a succession of hurricanes that have ravaged the southern United States.

"People have learned their lesson and know better how to prepare. We're not waiting until the last minute anymore," said Andrea Yerger, 48, of Port Charlotte. She was buying material to protect her house, which had to be gutted because of damage from Hurricane Charley last year.

Wilma became a hurricane Tuesday, and its top sustained winds had increased to 80 mph by mid-afternoon. Forecasters warned it could become a Category 4 hurricane by Thursday with winds of at least 131 mph, but it was expected to weaken somewhat before landfall.

Wilma was expected to strengthen on a path that could threaten coastal areas like Punta Gorda in southwestern Florida that were hit by Charley, a Category 4 storm that was the first of six hurricanes to strike the state since August 2004.

9/11 Museum Aims to Strike Realistic Tone

'Immersive' area would surround visitors with sights, sounds of attacks

NEW YORK | Visitors to the Sept. 11 memorial museum could relive the 2001 terrorist attacks in an "immersive" area that surrounds them with pictures of the falling towers, the sounds of police sirens and the last words of some of those who died at the World Trade Center.

The first piece of steel to be hit by a hijacked jet — as well as keys pulled from ground zero, and a contemplative area where visitors can leave personal messages — are among other proposed exhibits for the museum. The plans were presented in public workshops over the past month.

The memorial museum — not scheduled to open for at least five years — would be built around the twin towers' footprints and a slurry wall that are the last remnants of the trade center. Visitors would view exhibits while descending to the footprints 70 feet below street level, and then walk up again.

Panel Presses For More Simple Tax Paperwork

WASHINGTON | Most deductions, credits and other tax breaks would be eliminated along with much of the paperwork and equations that baffle taxpayers under a drastically simplified income tax proposed by a presidential commission on Tuesday.

The President's Advisory Panel for Federal Tax Reform endorsed two alternatives for inclusion in a report due Nov. 1.

Both would drastically simplify the tax system for individuals and families but also would rewrite or remove some of the most popular deductions and credits. (AP)

Filth, Uncertainty in Biloxi

Some of the poorest Katrina victims still waiting for assistance

BILOXI, MISS. | In the poorest of neighborhoods here, people sleep outside with no running water or power. They live among starving cats, rotting heaps of garbage and constant, buzzing flies. The bathroom is anywhere and everywhere. The filth is inescapable.

After Hurricane Katrina ravaged their little white house of 20 years, Mike Hardy and his wife lived outside on their broken, warped porch — next to piles of stinking debris and the massive tree that fell.

Their living quarters were next to a dirty commode strapped underneath a metal walker. "That's our bathroom," said Hardy.

People subsisting in similar, squalid conditions can be found all over east Biloxi, this city's version of the lower Ninth Ward in New Orleans and only blocks behind the wealthy casinos that line the coast.

Those interviewed — black, white and Vietnamese — feel that the Federal Emergency Management Agency has forgotten them. Nobody cares about the poor, they say. Never have, never did. Katrina didn't kill them, but they fear the coming weeks might.

FEMA says it hasn't abandoned Biloxi's destitute and has already provided $465 million in housing assistance in Mississippi.

Jess Seigal, a FEMA spokesman in Biloxi, acknowledged that it's difficult to find temporary housing on the coast. FEMA is trying to get trailers to everyone and knows people are frustrated. Seigal said 3,915 units have already been delivered to the six southern counties in Mississippi, including Harrison where Biloxi sits.

He estimates the state will need a total of 30,000 units. He didn't know how many would be required in Biloxi. FEMA was trying to distribute 500 a day. ADAM GOLDMAN (AP)

College Price Hikes Slow, But Still Outpace Inflation

For students and parents, it's the first sliver of good news about college costs for several years: price increases slowed this year, growing at the lowest rate since 2001.

But the bad news is the 7.1 percent increase at public four-year universities remains well above the general inflation rate, and drove the "list price" of tuition and fees at those schools to an average of $5,491, according to an annual survey released Tuesday by the College Board.

And while total financial aid is increasing, loans accounted for more of the growth than grants for the third consecutive year, the College Board said. Students have to pay back loans, but not grants.

BY THE NUMBERS

Funding a student's higher education is still a costly proposition:

→ The average debt for undergraduate borrowers is $15,000.

→ Including charges for room and board, costs at public four-year schools rose 6.6 percent to an average of $11,376. Private four-year nonprofit schools, rose 5.7 percent to $27,465.

James Boyle, president of the group College Parents of America, said enough isn't being done to hold down costs. "The beat goes on with increases in colleges costs, and parents are growing weary of the same old tune," he said. JUSTIN POPE (AP)

Study Suggests Higher Risks From Obesity Surgery

CHICAGO | The chances of dying within a year after obesity surgery are much higher than previously thought, even among people in their 30s and 40s, a study of more than 16,000 Medicare patients found.

Some previous studies of people in their 30s to their 50s found death rates well under 1 percent. But among 35- to 44-year-olds in the Medicare study, more than 5 percent of men and nearly 3 percent of women were dead within a year.

Dr. Neil Hutcher, president of the American Society for Bariatric Surgery, said that Medicare patients are probably sicker than the general U.S. population and that complication rates have declined as surgeons' expertise has increased. (AP)

Saddam to Face First Day in Court

Lawyer for ousted Iraqi leader to seek 3-month delay at trial

BAGHDAD, IRAQ | Nearly two years after his capture, Saddam Hussein is finally facing trial for alleged crimes against fellow Iraqis. In some ways, Iraq also will be on trial, with the world watching to see whether its new ruling class can rise above politics and prejudice and give the former dictator a fair hearing.

Saddam's lawyer said Tuesday he would ask for a three-month adjournment at his client's trial for a 1982 massacre, and challenge the court's competence to hear the case. The trial was to begin on Wednesday.

Khalil al-Dulaimi's comments appeared to suggest that his defense strategy will focus not on the details of the massacre but rather on the broader question of the legitimacy and competence of a court set up under U.S. occupation in 2003.

Saddam and seven senior members of his regime are facing charges that they ordered the killing in 1982 of nearly 150 people in the mainly Shiite village of Dujail north of Baghdad after a failed attempt on the former dictator's life.

The ousted Iraqi leader and his co-defendants were expected to hear the charges against them in Wednesday's session. The session was to be held under tight security in Baghdad's Green Zone, home to Iraq's government, parliament and the U.S. and British Embassies.

If convicted, the men face the death penalty — by hanging.

- Awad Hamed al-Bandar: Head of Revolutionary Court that issued death sentences against Dujail residents

Prosecutors are preparing other cases to bring to trial against Saddam and his officials — including for the Anfal Operation, a military crackdown on the Kurds in the late 1980s that killed some 180,000 people; the suppression of Kurdish and Shiite revolts in 1991; and the deaths of 5,000 Kurds in a 1988 poison gas attack on the village of Halabja.

If a death sentence is issued in the Dujail case, it is unclear whether it would be carried out regardless of whether Saddam is involved in other trials. HAMZA HENDAWI (AP)

Results of Iraq Charter Vote Delayed

BAGHDAD, IRAQ | Final results from Iraq's landmark referendum on a new constitution will likely not be announced until Friday at the earliest because of delays getting counts to the capital and a wide-ranging audit of an unexpectedly high number of "yes" votes, election officials said.

The returns have raised questions over the possibility of irregularities in the balloting. With the delays, the outcome of the crucial referendum will remain up in the air possibly into next week, at a time when the government had hoped to move public attention to a new milestone: the start of the trial of ousted dictator Saddam Hussein on Wednesday.

Meanwhile, insurgent attacks began to heat up again after being nearly silent on referendum day Saturday.

An American soldier was shot and killed in Mosul early Tuesday, the military said. In fighting in western Iraq, two U.S. Marines and four militants were killed Monday near the town of Rutba, not far from the Jordanian border, the military said.

Militants killed at least nine Iraqis elsewhere Tuesday in shootings and a mortar attack, including an adviser to the industry minister, one of the country's top Sunni Arab officials, police said. (AP)

Island Countries Brace for Wilma

SAN PEDRO SULA, HONDURAS | A record-tying 12th hurricane of the Atlantic season formed in the Caribbean on Tuesday, set on a course that would brush Central America, drench Cancun and then belt Cuba.

The government of flood-prone Honduras warned that Hurricane Wilma posed "an imminent threat to life and property of the people of the Atlantic coast." Cuba and Mexico both issued hurricane watches.

Wilma already had been blamed for one death in Jamaica as a tropical depression on Sunday and it pounded the island for a third day Tuesday. (AP)

Dust, dirt, pollen, animal dander and other air-borne contaminants are pulled into your duct system every time the furnace or air conditioner runs.

These contaminants build up inside the ductwork over time and can help make your duct system a breeding ground for mold spores, bacteria, fungus, mildew and other microbes.

Each time the furnace or air conditioner is turned on, contaminants are spewed out and circulated throughout your home and affect the health and comfort of your family.

Family members who suffer from allergies, asthma or other respiratory ailments as well as children and the elderly are especially vulnerable to the effects of indoor air pollutants.

The removal of contaminants from the entire HVAC system is recognized by industry experts as the most effective way to eliminate air duct pollutants. This is referred to as the "source removal" method of duct cleaning.

In addition to the obvious health benefits, ducts cleaning can help you maintain a cleaner home. It also helps to restore HVAC system capacity and lessen running time, resulting in lower heating and cooling bills.

The HEPA-AIRE method used by our company assures you that your ducts are being cleaned with the most advanced source removal equipment available.

Pakistani Relief Efforts Continue

Musharraf proposes more access to divided Kashmir for quake aid

MUZAFFARABAD, PAKISTAN | Pakistan on Tuesday proposed allowing Kashmiris to cross the frontier dividing the territory with India to help earthquake victims — the latest sign of cooperation between the nuclear rivals since this month's disaster.

Pakistani and U.S. military helicopters were delivering aid to hard-hit Muzaffarabad, which has become a relief distribution hub for survivors of the Oct. 8 temblor. But the U.N. World Food Program warned that 500,000 earthquake survivors have yet to receive supplies.

Relief workers visited one village where an 8-year-old girl died Tuesday of abdominal injuries they said could easily have been treated a short helicopter ride away.

The death highlighted the predicament facing thousands of injured stranded in the mountains, many with infections that could turn deadly unless they get medical treatment.

At least 54,000 people died in the Oct. 8 disaster, most in the Pakistani-held part of Kashmir. India reported 1,361 deaths on its side. The United Nations has estimated 3.3 million were left without homes.

President Gen. Pervez Musharraf suggested letting Kashmiris cross the so-called Line of Control in Kashmir, a move that would encourage cooperation between the two neighbors in the disputed region. Kashmir is divided between Pakistan and India, and both nations claim it in its entirety.

India, which has sent quake relief supplies to Pakistan, hailed Musharraf's proposal but said it was awaiting more details before deciding whether to accept it. (AP)

Hundreds lined the road from Uganda's main airport — some shouting insults or waving fists — Tuesday as the body of former dictator Milton Obote was returned to the East African country, two days ahead of a state funeral in his honor. # China's Defense Budget Disputed

Rumsfeld, on trip to Beijing, says spending changes sow suspicion

BEIJING | China is raising global suspicion about its military intentions by failing to acknowledge the true size of recent increases in its defense spending, Defense Secretary Donald H. Rumsfeld said Tuesday.

On his first trip to China as President Bush's Pentagon chief, Rumsfeld is meeting with government officials and senior military leaders in advance of Bush's planned visit next month.

Rumsfeld will speak Wednesday at the Central Party School, one of the Communist Party's top training centers and its main ideological think tank. President Hu Jintao was the school's president before he became the Communist Party general secretary in 2002.

In an interview with reporters accompanying him from Washington, Rumsfeld said the U.S. and others would like to know why the Chinese government has understated its defense spending. He mentioned no budget figures, but the Pentagon said last summer that China may be spending $90 billions on defense this year — three times the announced total.

Asked about Rumsfeld's comments, Chinese Foreign Ministry spokesman Kong Quan said Beijing hopes the visit can "increase mutual understanding and trust" between the two sides.

Among topics expected to arise during Rumsfeld's visit: tensions over Taiwan, the self-governing island that China insists on reuniting with the mainland, and U.S. hopes for China to use its influence in six-party negotiations to end North Korea's nuclear ambitions. ROBERT BURNS (AP)

EU: Avian Flu Is A 'Global Threat'

LUXEMBOURG | The European Union on Tuesday declared the spread of bird flu from Asia into the EU a "global threat" requiring international cooperation, saying western Europe was ill prepared to deal with an influenza emergency.

EU Health Commissioner Markos Kyprianou said most of the 25 EU governments lack sufficient stocks of anti-viral drugs designed to boost resistance to the common flu in such risk groups as the elderly, the young, diabetics and others.

He said the EU was working on a deal with the pharmaceutical industry whereby EU governments will "increase vaccination for sea-

Wholesale Inflation Soars

Energy costs blamed for fueling biggest price jump in 15 years

WASHINGTON | Wholesale inflation jumped by the largest amount in 15 years in September and there are worrisome signs that soaring energy prices from the hurricanes are beginning to spill over to the rest of the economy.

Prices at the wholesale level rose 1.9 percent, the biggest increase since the first Persian Gulf War in 1990. Like the 1.2 percent September jump in consumer prices announced last week, the biggest in 25 years, the surge was led by energy costs reflecting the shutdowns of production following Hurricanes Katrina and Rita.

But the report on wholesale prices raised more worries because it showed that outside of food and energy, price pressures were increasing. The so-called "core rate" of wholesale inflation rose by 0.3 percent last month after no change in August.

Of 30 nonfood consumer goods tracked in the wholesale price report, 20 posted price increases and only two — soaps and toys — showed price declines, a marked turnaround from earlier in the year when most categories were showing declines.

"Slowly, but inexorably, inflationary pressures are building across the economy," said Joel Naroff, chief economist at Naroff Economic Advisors, a private consulting firm.

The worry is that a sharp jump in energy prices will begin to put pressure on products outside of energy and cause the underlying rate of inflation to start rising. That could prompt the Federal Reserve to accelerate its interest rate increases in an effort to slow the economy and keep inflation from getting out of hand. MARTIN CRUTSINGER (AP)

Refco's Tailspin Ends in Bankruptcy

NEW YORK | It took just eight days for Refco Inc. to go from up-and-comer to down-and-out, with a midnight bankruptcy announcement capping off the commodities broker's stunning collapse.

A consortium of private buy-out firms tentatively agreed late Monday to purchase Refco's commodities trading subsidiary for $768 million, salvaging one of the few solvent divisions in the company. Refco and 23 of its subsidiaries then filed for Chapter 11 protection.

Refco officials ring the opening bell on the New York Stock Exchange on Sept. 9, a month before its collapse began.

The private investors, led by J.C. Flowers & Co. LLP, say they hope to rescue all of Refco, which tumbled swiftly into bankruptcy after the company revealed Oct. 10 that former Chief Executive Phillip Bennett hid $430 million in bad debt from regulators and shareholders.

Customers abandoned Refco in droves after the fraud charges against Bennett were revealed, helping precipitate a cash crunch that led to the bankruptcy filing.

Threat Closes Md. Tunnels

Effort to secure city's harbor crossings leads to traffic tie-ups

BALTIMORE | Authorities closed one of two highway tunnels carrying traffic under Baltimore's harbor for nearly two hours Tuesday and partially shut the other because of a threat to detonate vehicles full of explosives inside the tubes.

The Baltimore Harbor Tunnel was closed and the Fort McHenry Tunnel was reduced to one lane of traffic in each direction. The closures began about 11:30 a.m. and officers began reopening the tubes about 1:15 p.m., but in and around Baltimore traffic was backed up for hours.

"The information was somewhat specific as to date and time," Kevin Perkins, special agent in charge of Police search trailers and trucks at the Fort McHenry Tunnel in Baltimore on Tuesday after a threat to it and the Harbor Tunnel restricted traffic flow for hours.

the FBI's Baltimore field office, said at an evening news conference. "At this point, no evidence collected to date has corroborated the threat."

The Baltimore FBI's Joint Terrorism Task Force was heading the threat probe. Perkins said several people were interviewed, but he declined to say whether arrests had been made.

Changes to D.C.'s DUI Law OK'd

WASHINGTON | The D.C. Council passed emergency legislation Tuesday that would change drunk driving laws in the District to ensure that no one will be arrested for having "a few swallows of wine," said Carol Schwartz, the council member who introduced the bill.

Schwartz

The council decided to address the issue after reports last week that a 45-year-old woman was arrested for driving after drinking a single glass of wine with dinner.

Mayor Anthony A. Williams criticized the legislation and will review the bill over the next 10 days before deciding whether to veto it.

GOP candidate says state should get tough on domestic violence

RICHMOND, VA. | After a week of unstinting attacks on his Democratic foe as a bleeding heart who might spare killers the death penalty, Republican Jerry Kilgore switched his campaign's focus Tuesday to spousal abuse.

Accompanied in a conference call with reporters by three female lawmakers and a woman who survived her husband's murderous rage, Kilgore called for tougher punishment for those who violate court-issued protective orders.

Kilgore said his first encounter

he was a prosecutor.

On the line with Kilgore was Barbara Shifflett Fridley, whose two daughters, 4-year-old Christina Zirkle and 14-year-old Jessica Shifflett, were killed in 1999 by the husband who had battered her, Daniel Lee Zirkle, who was put to death in 2002 for the slayings.

Fuel for Hybrid Debate

2006 gas-electric Honda Civic could change some minds

ROAD TEST | In a strange analog to the culture wars over abortion and gay marriage, a debate is raging in the blogosphere over the value of hybrid technology. You would hope that such a debate would be nonpartisan. You would hope in vain. One blogger dismisses the technology as an emotional sop for liberals, "pure tree-hugging feel-good-ism."

Almost lost in all this is just how amazing these machines are. The Honda Civic hybrid is a five-passenger, full-featured sedan; it's packed with safety features, everything from compatibility-minded lessen impacts to pedestrians. And yet, loaded like Tara Reid on Ibiza, the car weighs only 2,875 pounds, aces Honda's internal tests mimicking the government's frontal and side-impact resilience, gets in excess of 40 mpg and has almost immeasurably clean emissions. Such a car was the stuff of science fiction 10 years ago.

And it looks really cool. Its defining characteristic is the 21.9-degree windshield rake. The slicked-back look is often used on concept cars but is discarded in production cars because it creates an unmanageable flat space behind the steering wheel. Honda turned this to their advantage, creating a beautiful two-tier instrument panel.

Car Care

Automotive expert PAT GOSS owns Pat Goss Car World, Inc., a local car repair company. He chats monthly on washingtonpost.com/cars.

I drive a manual transmission Chevrolet Cavalier. I've heard people say downshifting is horrible and others say it is good. Also, when waiting for a light, is it better to leave my clutch down or to be in neutral?

Downshifting can be great fun, and it saves brakes, but stop and think about that. You're saving wear on some of the least expensive parts on the vehicle by adding wear to the three most expensive parts on the car. Downshifting adds wear to the engine, the transmission and the clutch. So if you enjoy it, go for it. If you're trying to save money, don't even consider it. Sitting at a light, the transmission should be in first gear, and the clutch pedal held to the floor.

How much is too much to pay for any future repairs on a 1989 Camry with 240,000-plus miles?

When the monthly repair bills exceed the cost of owning and operating a new car. In order to figure that out, you would take the price of the new vehicle, add tax and fees, then amortize that over four or five years. Then amortize projected depreciation over the same time period, divide by the number of months in the time period, and compare the monthly repair costs to the cost of owning a new vehicle. Those are the hard numbers. Most people buy new cars not because it makes financial sense but because they are tired of the old car.

After 85,000 miles, my 2001 Passat's original brakes are a little soft. I'm not having any trouble stopping, but I have perceived a little difference for the last 5,000 miles or so. The dealer wants to replace the rotors as well as the pads, to the tune of about $400. Is that reasonable?

It's reasonable if that's what it needs. It's totally unreasonable if it's not what it needs. A soft pedal usually doesn't equate to worn brakes. It usually means a fluid problem, and in this case it might call for a brake flush. Another consideration: If you are describing soft as more pedal travel, however, then the dealer is probably right on the money.

Adu Blows Up Over Playing Time

Teen star hints at D.C. departure after season

UNITED | Freddy Adu vented his frustration over lack of playing time Tuesday, saying it has wrecked his chances of making the U.S. World Cup team and has him thinking about leaving D.C. United.

United coach Peter Nowak fired back, saying tersely that Adu has had his chances to play and that "nobody is going to be above this team."

The tension between discipli-narian coach and teenage player resurfaced as United prepared to open the MLS playoffs Friday night at Chicago. The 16-year-old Adu was particularly upset that he didn't start the regular-season finale Saturday against Columbus, one week after winning double league honors for player of the week and goal of the week for a highlight-reel score against Real Salt Lake.

"I got player of the week that week, and the next week I'm sitting on the bench," Adu said. "And I'm just like, 'What is going on here?'"

Adu

Adu voiced his frustration over playing time several times last year, even though he started 14 of 30 games and scored five goals with three assists — while Nowak took United to their fourth

MLS title.

This year, Adu has started 16 of 25 games. He has four goals and six assists and has to vie for playing time on a deep roster that includes Christian Gomez, Jaime Moreno, Ben Olsen and Santino Quaranta.

Thus, on the brink of the MLS playoffs, Adu is already thinking about next year. "It becomes very, very, very tempting to look ahead, and as a matter of fact I am doing that right now," Adu said. "I'm just looking into things right now, so we'll see what happens at the end of this season and we'll see where my family and myself are headed."

"I'm not saying that I'm going to leave, but I always have to look ahead and see what the best situation is," Adu added.

Team president Kevin Payne said he "absolutely" expects Adu back next season.

Adu's frustration is compounded by his desire to play in the World Cup in Germany. With every minute on the bench, Adu sees his chances to impress U.S. team coach Bruce Arena slipping away.

"That's definitely killed my chances," Adu said. JOSEPH WHITE (AP)

Hokies' Imoh Tries to Regain Footing

COLLEGE FOOTBALL | Virginia Tech running back Mike Imoh says his ankle injury is improving, making now the time to turn his season around.

"It's been kind of rough, injury-wise. I'm just now starting to get back to 100 percent," said Imoh, who is from Fairfax. "I expect more from myself and I'm trying to pick it up in the second half of the season."

Imoh, a senior, started the season with 18 carries against North Carolina State, scoring a touchdown but averaging only 3.1 yards a carry. Since then, he has not had more than 13 carries in a game and has split carries with Cedric Humes.

Even with the injuries, the former standout at Robinson High School has shown flashes of brilliance — especially against Duke, when he ran for a season-best 66 yards on only 8 carries. It's that kind of performance he's trying to recreate against Maryland Thursday — though he knows it won't be easy for third-ranked, undefeated Virginia Tech. "Maryland is definitely a threat. Last year we got them pretty good, and they're going to definitely try to get us back at their home," Imoh said.

He also has another, more personal motive for making a statement against the Terrapins (4-2). "Maryland didn't really recruit me. They thought I was a little too small," said Imoh, a 2001 Associated Press Player of the Year who was also named to the Washington Post All-Met Team. CHRIS MINCHER (EXPRESS)

Maryland well rested ahead of home game against Virginia Tech

TERPS FOOTBALL | The momentum from a three-game winning streak was dampened by a break in the schedule, yet Maryland's football team expects to ultimately benefit from getting some extra time to prepare for its biggest challenge of the season.

The Terrapins (4-2, 2-1 Atlantic Coast Conference) can gain a share of first place in the league's Atlantic Division with a victory at home Thursday night against the ACC's lone unbeaten team:

third-ranked Virginia Tech (6-0, 3-0). The Hokies won last year's game 55-6.

It will be Maryland's first game since a 38-7 rout of Temple on Oct. 8. The Terrapins have taken on a bit of rust since then, but the break probably couldn't have come at a better point in the season.

"I think it gave a little more time to prepare," Friedgen said. "They do some things that are pretty difficult. Hopefully that time will be beneficial to us." DAVID GINSBURG (AP)

The number of Major League Baseball players to be suspended for steroids. The latest is Mets reliever Felix Heredia, whose punishment was handed down on Tuesday.

PEPPERED: Olie the Goalie has faced no shortage of shots this season. Opponents are averaging 35.5 against the Capitals.

Caps' Kolzig Saves the Day

Goalie rises to the challenge with young defense

CAPITALS | The Washington Capitals have a drill in which seven players surround Olaf Kolzig. Working with a single puck, they pepper the goaltender with shots until he either smothers the rebound or allows one to get by.

It's similar to the challenge Kolzig has faced in every one of his six starts.

Olie the Goalie has faced an average of 35.5 shots a game, and his play has led the young, inexperienced Capitals to a satisfying 3-4 start. "He's been unbelievable," Washington wing Chris Clark said.

The Capitals were outshot 40-14 by Tampa Bay on Sunday, but Kolzig made 38 saves to lift Washington to a 3-2 victory. "We're a little inexperienced in the back end and we're still adjusting to the new rules," Kolzig said. "So we're going to give up some shots."

And the 35-year-old Kolzig has absorbed plenty of shots, many of which have nothing to do with flying pucks. The league's crackdown on obstruction means defensemen can no longer use their sticks or hands to slow down opposing forwards, and several of those attackers have found their way into the crease, taking Kolzig down in the process.

It's also difficult to make a save when the other guys have an extra man on the ice. The Capitals have been forced to play short-handed a whopping 62 times — easily the league high — and might be winless were it not for Kolzig. "We think he's the best goalie in the league," coach Glen Hanlon said. DAVID GINSBURG (AP)

BALCO Head Conte Gets Jail Time

DOPING | Victor Conte was sentenced to four months in prison and four months' home confinement Tuesday for his role as the mastermind in a scheme to provide pro athletes with undetectable banned drugs.

Conte, who negotiated a plea deal with federal prosecutors, started the Bay Area Laboratory Co-Operative. The lab, according to court records, counted dozens of prominent athletes among its clients, including baseball's Barry Bonds and Jason Giambi and Olympic track and field star Marion Jones.

Greg Anderson, Bonds' trainer and friend, was sentenced to three months behind bars and three months in home confinement. James Valente, BALCO's vice president, was sentenced to probation after pleading guilty to reduced charges of steroid distribution.

Outside the courthouse, Conte read a statement saying he wanted to rid sports of steroids. "I've decided to direct my knowledge, experience and determination toward making sports more honorable for the athletes and fans," Conte said. (AP)

Pujols' Blast Lifts Spirit of St. Louis

With the season on the line, Cardinals made sure to give star a shot

NLCS | Two strikes to go and the season hanging in the balance, there's nobody the St. Louis Cardinals would rather have at the plate than Albert Pujols.

From his first day in the major leagues as a relatively unknown 21-year-old who played wherever his team needed him, Pujols has been one of the best in the game.

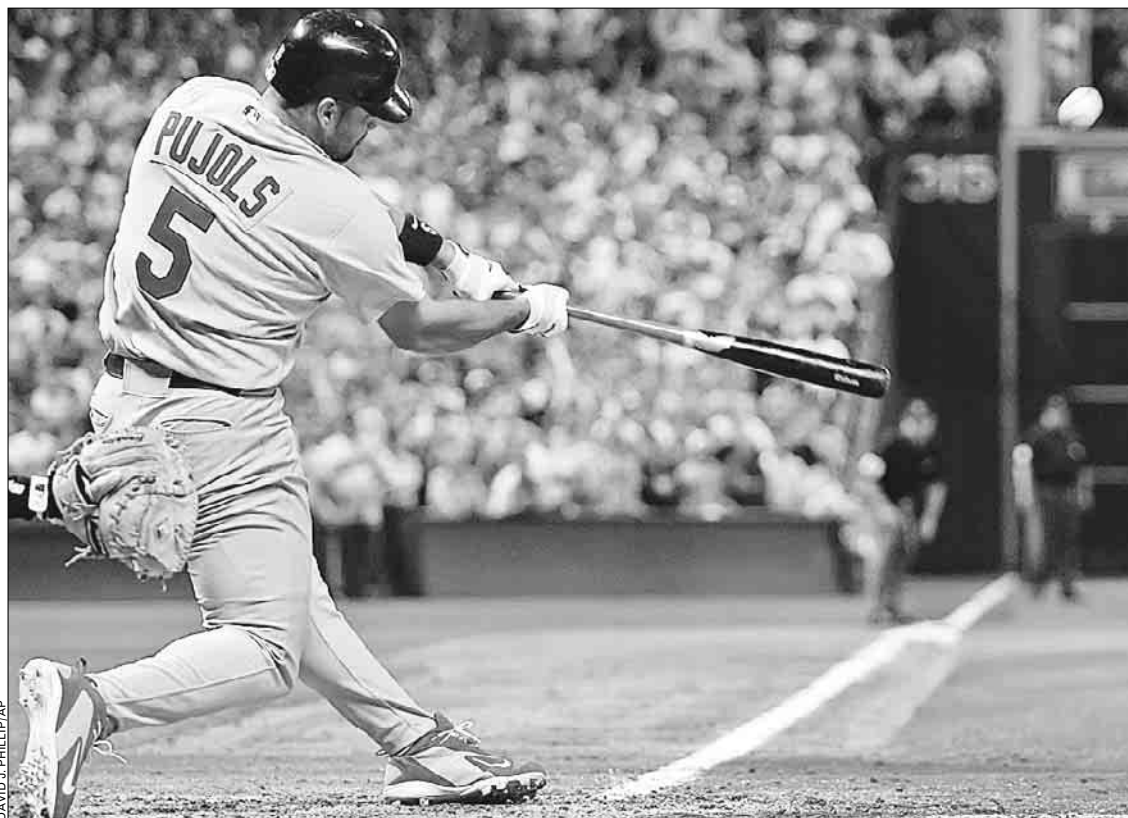

So it's no surprise the Cardinals worked hard to put the game in Pujols' hands.

And, he responded by shocking the Houston Astros with a dramatic three-run homer that cut Houston Astros' NL championship series lead to 3-2 and sent the series back to St. Louis for Game 6 on Wednesday night.

David Eckstein, who started the two-out rally when he scratched out a single against Astros closer Brad Lidge, knew more than ever that he had to be a table-setter.

"It was one of those things that you just find a way to get Albert up," Eckstein said. "That was probably the thought process for a lot of people in that dugout."

"Because if he's up we've got at least two guys on and we have a chance."

Pujols is among the leading MVP candidates this year after finishing second in batting (.330) while hitting 41 homers and driving in 117 runs and leading the majors with 129 runs. It's typical production from the first player in major league history to hit 30 homers in his first five seasons, the third-youngest player to reach 200 homers, the fourth player to begin his career with five straight 100-RBI seasons.

"He's obviously the best I've ever played with," Game 6 starter Mark Mulder said. "He's unlike anybody else, he's a special player."

Nats' Top Scout Gets Extension

NATIONALS | The Washington Nationals gave director of amateur scouting Dana Brown a one-year contract extension Tuesday.

Brown, with the club since 2002, is now signed through 2006.

"I believe that Dana Brown is one of the best young amateur talent evaluators, especially when it comes to pitching, in Major League Baseball," general manager Jim Bowden said. "Recently, we denied another organization the opportunity to interview Dana because we view him as a vital component of this franchise as we build for the future."

During Brown's tenure, the franchise's first-round picks have included closer Chad Cordero (2003) and third baseman Ryan Zimmerman (2005). Cordero was an All-Star and led the majors with 47 saves this season, while Zimmerman hit .397 with 10 doubles in 20 games when he was called up in September.

The Nationals were the only major league club with two first-round picks from the past three amateur drafts on the season-ending roster. (AP)

NBA Tells Players to Suit Up, Sort Of

Stern defends rule for 'business casual' attire while on the job

NBA | Commissioner David Stern wanted to come up with a dress code that wouldn't restrict his players.

So he picked one that wouldn't bother his owners, either.

"What we came up with is a dress code that even Mark Cuban could comply with — if he wanted to," Stern said Tuesday.

On Monday, the NBA announced in a memo to teams that a dress code will go into effect at the start of the season. Saying players must dress in "business casual" attire, the league banned items such as sleeveless shirts, shorts, sunglasses while indoors, and headphones during team or league business.

The policy also requires players on the bench who are not in uniform to wear sport jackets, shoes and socks. And while Stern knows some players will be critical of the policy, he said there was no reason to be, as even jeans are still allowed.

Cleveland star LeBron James was among those who saw the reasoning behind the new rules. "Sometimes you feel lazy on a flight and you don't want to put [dress] clothes on," James said. "But this is a job and we want to have fun, but it's a job and we should look like we're going to work." BRIAN MAHONEY (AP)

The Hunk Next Door

Soapy 'Housewives' meet their newest, and hottest, neighbor

ADDITIONS | Mehcad Brooks likes being Wisteria Lane's latest hunk. Just don't ask him what's in the basement.

"It changes you as much as you let it," he said of his newfound fame as Matthew Applewhite on ABC's "Desperate Housewives." "You kind of need to keep the same people around you."

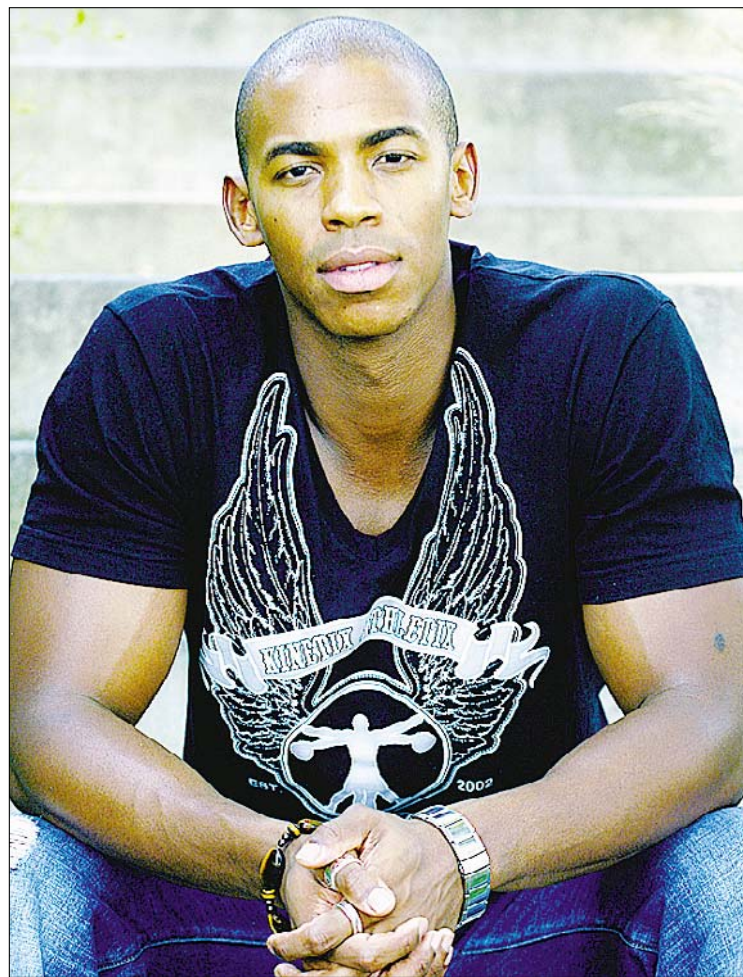

But that means his "bills are higher," he jokes, because he's picking up the restaurant tab for his pals more often.

Matthew and mother Betty (Alfre Woodard) are objects of curiosity and suspicion in the neighborhood because of what they seem to be hiding in their home.

And such interest isn't limited to the script. In recent weeks Brooks has been approached by strangers demanding to know more about the mysterious cellar dweller, who on the last episode managed to escape captivity and had to be subdued by Matthew and mom with a pistol butt to the back of the head.

But Brooks will only say many surprises are in store for the popular U.S. soap opera.

"It's like those little Russian dolls. Open them up and there's more inside. The stories are very layered," he said.

Before moving to Wisteria Lane, Brooks was a relatively unknown actor, usually cast in athletic roles.

"My favorite thing about 'Housewives' is that I don't have to dribble a basketball," said the 6-foot-3-inch actor.

“My favorite thing about 'Housewives' is that I don't have to dribble a basketball.”

Now to address the TV season's other watercooler question: Yes, Brooks is single.

The 24-year-old actor was born in Austin, Texas. Brooks has worked as a model, but to help pay for college he also took less glamorous jobs, including window washer and theater usher.

"Desperate Housewives" creator Marc Cherry had not originally written the Applewhites to be black. But after two other actresses turned down the role of Betty, Woodard was suggested. As a "huge fan," Cherry immediately felt she was ideal.

"I'm not one of those guys who says, 'Oh, we have to have diversity,'" he explained. "I just want great actors — that's all I care about. Mehcad had just a fine upstanding look about him, but he has a slightly dangerous sexy quality, too, and we thought it was an intriguing combination." BRIDGET BYRNE (AP)

Crüe: Rated R for Rawk

Everything naughty you've heard about Mötley Crüe is true

MUSIC | "Mötley Crüe: Carnival of Sins" has all the crazy antics that make the band great: unicycle-riding midgets, fire-eating lesbian strippers, topless female fans ... oh yeah, there's music, too.

The DVD chronicling the heavy metal band's 155-city reunion tour this year embraces the best (and worst) clichés of the live concert video for a show that faithfully represents the delightful decadence perpetrated on a willing audience for 2 ½ hours each night.

The concert opens with a midget wearing an evil clown mask dancing onstage, two fishnet-and-lingerie-clad strippers and, eventually, the band, who roar into "Shout at the Devil" as flames shoot skyward and a red-and-white-striped big top curtain surrounds the stage.

The strippers are something to look at once you're tired of guitarist Mick Mars' skeletal pallor, drummer Tommy Lee's clown makeup, vocalist Vince Neil's baby fat and bassist Nikki Sixx's blood-spitting Gene Simmons impersonation.

Their playing is tight throughout a set list that includes the band's hits as well as steaming covers of "Helter Skelter" and the Sex Pistols' "Anarchy in the U.K." The two-disc set is rated R for nudity, sexual images and language. Lots and lots of language. WAYNE PARRY (AP)

Dolly Saddles Up Again

Singer Parton tours with 'Vintage' tunes

ON THE ROAD | On the eve of her 60th birthday, Dolly Parton has the verve, sass and energy of someone 35 years her junior. She is crisscrossing the country on her Vintage tour — a trek that surrounds the Oct. 11 release of her new album, the self-produced "Those Were the Days."

For the aptly named Vintage tour — produced by the House of Blues — the legendary artist performs a mix of Parton classics and songs from the new Sugar Hill Records album, which is a collection of covers from the 1960s and 1970s.

For the most part, they are folk-pop nuggets of a political bent. Originally created during a time of strife and unease, era-defining songs like "Blowin' in the Wind," "Imagine" and "Where Have All the Flowers Gone" take on a contemporary meaning in 2005.

"For me, these songs are not really political, but more a sign of the times," Parton said. "I see them as songs of hope, songs with strong messages, songs that take on a new relevance today."

But she is not alone on this fine

NATURAL WOMAN: The folk and rock songs on Parton's new album still resonate.

collection. She is joined by veteran artists who originally made some of the songs famous (Roger McGuinn of the Byrds, Yusuf Islam aka Cat Stevens, Tommy James and others) — as well as by contemporary voices, including Norah Jones, Alison Krauss, Keith Urban and Nickel Creek.

Because of the album's concept, Parton is poised to bring a passel of new fans into her fold — while not losing the ones that have remained by her side over the years.

James, who sings with Parton on "Crimson and Clover," a song that he and the Shondells took to the summit of The Billboard Hot 100 in 1968, believes people will rally around this release.

"She'll bring her whole audience — the young and the old — to this recording," he said.

Games Driven To Race

VIDEO GAMES | As if the daily grind wasn't bad enough, it's usually wedged inside the daily commute. Enter the twisted metal logic of video games, where crashes are encouraged, there's a speed minimum instead of a limit, and grid-lock is just another obstacle to plow through. Some games intended to unleash a case of lead foot:

→ Burnout Revenge (for PlayStation 2, Xbox) The sense of speed is perfectly rendered here, with 200-mph action that actually blurs the graphics. You'll career through an excellent variety of courses that includes urban alleys and twisting mountain roads. A new "Traffic Attack" mode is great for stress relief — it's such easy, sadistic fun to imagine yourself ramming stupid drivers.

→ FlatOut (for PlayStation 2, Xbox and personal computers) "FlatOut" should be mandatory for those trying to pass driver's ed, if only because it so vividly shows what can happen when you don't wear a seat belt. Your driver can be repeatedly ejected as you skid around a dirt track filled with stacks of lumber, scaffolding and tree stumps. There's a special mode where you can crash your flailing driver against giant dart boards and bowling pins.

→ I87 Ride or Die (for PlayStation 2, Xbox) As you drive around a series of rather short urban tracks in this game about thugs vying for street cred, you collect a cache of machine guns and bazookas to blow rivals off the street. Successful takeouts result in some cool slow-motion replays of the flying, burning wreckage of your foes. But there isn't much variety to the weapons, and the tracks are short and get boring fast. THE MAN CAN'T STAY AWAY: Michael J. Fox, who split "Spin City" because of his battle with Parkinson's disease, is getting back on the prime-time horse with a guest spot on ABC's courtroom drama "Boston Legal."

The Grime Patrol

Style's 'Clean House' sweeps out some of the dirtiest houses

DEBUT | "Clean House" (10 p.m., Style) may sound like a show that teaches remedial courses on dusting and vacuuming, but it's much more fun than that. Comedian Niecy Nash hosts. Her modus operandi is to descend on a cluttered, untidy home and collect stories about it from the residents. Just how did a middle-aged married man and father of two collect 4,000 Beanie Babies and a zillion baseball cards?

WHAT A DUMP: Niecy Nash wants to know what's under your bed — and why.

And why? Once the anecdotes about unhinged acquisitions are complete, Niecy's team sizes up the value of the "collection" and sets about selling it at a yard sale. One subject is reduced to tears as a pile of possessions decades in the making is bartered away for pennies on the dollar. But in the show's third act, the "Clean House" gang uses the proceeds to buy, renovate, decorate and organize the subject's claustrophobic dump into a cheery, livable space. There's nothing groundbreaking about "Clean House," but the stories are funny and Niecy presides over her renovations with quick wit and empathy. KEVIN MCDONOUGH (UNITED FEATURE SYNDICATE)

ON TV TONIGHT

BOMBS AWAY
SECRETS OF THE DEAD (8 p.m., PBS) enters its fifth season with a glance at Hitler's top-secret weapons program. This episode relies on recently uncovered home movies, many in color, by American forces combing through shattered bunkers and laboratories.
TONGS AT 20 PACES
High noon at the salad bar on THE APPRENTICE: MARTHA STEWART (9 p.m., NBC).
VISION QUEST
LOST (9 p.m., ABC) Michael runs off in search of his missing son.
CULT CHOICE
Kim Hunter stars as the sister of a woman ensnared in a circle of Satanists in the 1943 shocker THE SEVENTH VICTIM

SOUVENIR: Former RAF pilot Eric Brown with a captured Messerschmitt. (9:15 p.m. TCM). This is part of a night-long salute to the macabre low-budget movies churned out by producer Val Lewton during World War II. The list includes CAT PEOPLE (8 p.m.) and I WALKED WITH A ZOMBIE (10:30 p.m.). KEVIN MCDONOUGH (UNITED FEATURE SYNDICATE)

DailyCandy hunts down what's cool on the streets of D.C.

Washington is the province of power ties and razor-straight parts, where shoulder pads are worn without '80s nostalgia or even irony, where "The Star-Spangled Banner" drowns out the latest rap anthem, where twentysomethings angle to hang out with politicians older than their grandfathers. It's a dignified city, perhaps, but "super-cool?" Not so much.

Unless, of course, you're rolling with Annie Lou Bayly, the editor of DailyCandy D.C., a new online publication that plumbs the hip undercurrents of this marble metropolis.

"D.C. is not what you think," the 29-year-old Northwest D.C. native says. "There are so many people who are, you know, cool. And interesting and fun. They want to go out and be engaged in the city."

Bayly's own coolness is palpable. She is the kind who throws croquet-and-champagne parties, who pairs the latest dark-wash James Jeans with a handmade cotton halter top. The woman works like an air-conditioning unit: Other stuff grows cooler in her presence. Such as cupcakes, which seem more pre-K birthday party than trendy mid-morning treat until Bayly invites you to sample some at Love Cafe on U Street. Suddenly they couldn't seem more stylish if they had exclusive Italian logos stamped in their icing.

"These are the best cupcakes ever," she declares.

Yet Bayly decides to skip the baked goods this morning, opting instead for a bottle of sparkling artisanal water.

Maybe the only pre-noon sweetness she can stand is her DailyCandy e-mail, which — since its mid-September launch — has gone out to an undisclosed numbers of subscribers in the metro area around 3 each morning. The message briefs readers on the fad du jour, whether it's gorgonzola-stuffed olives from a little-known Morse Street NE market or asymmetrical argyle sweaters hidden in an Arlington denim boutique.

With Bayly's blessing, anything can become cool, including the DMV:

She recently plugged a funky little company whose employees will wait in the inspection lines for you.

"The idea is that DailyCandy is like your best friend whispering in your ear," Bayly said. So listen up.

The D.C. edition is the latest in the expansion of the free DailyCandy service, which began trend-spotting about five years ago in New York City, then Los Angeles and Chicago. Along with offering a generic nationwide version, it broadcasts city-specific tidbits about arts and entertainment, clothes and home decor.

This year, the thriving publication launched localized spin-offs in London, Dallas, Boston, San Francisco and, now, Washington.

The private company makes money by selling advertising space said editor-at-large Dannielle Romano, and targets "sophisticated urban women" and reaches more of them than most city magazines.

Metro Finds Just the Right Word

Transit

In an effort to change riding habits, agency coins new vocabulary

Webster's Dictionary doesn't define "conseaterate," but subway and bus riders will learn the meaning from new signs.

A Metro ad campaign unveiled Tuesday is aimed at getting riders to change some behaviors. For example, a "doorker" is defined as a "person who crowds or blocks Metro doors, making it difficult for others to exit or enter promptly."

"There's one called 'conseaterate,' which is a blending of the words considerate and seat," said Metro spokeswoman Cathy Asato. "And the meaning for that is 'thoughtful toward others who are more in need of a Metrorail or Metrobus seat.'"

On crowded trains, you sometimes can't avoid being what Metro calls a "doorker," one who stands near rail car doors.

Other new words to add to passengers' vocabulary are a sign of the times in this post-Sept. 11 world.

"PlanBdextrous" describes a person "able to plan an alternate route home in case Metro is inaccessible due to unforeseen circumstances," while "sumpsnspicious," is a noun defined as an "unattended pack-

METRO GLOSSARY

- CONSEATERATE: adj., thoughtful toward others who are more in need of a Metrorail or Metrobus seat.
- SUMPSNSPICIOUS: n., unattended package or odd, unusual behavior that is reported to a bus driver, train operator (via intercom at end of rail car), station manager or Metro Police at 202-962-2121.
- PLANBDEXTRIOUS: adj., able to plan an alternate route home in case Metro is inaccessible due to unforeseen circumstances.
- DOORKER: n., person who crowds or blocks Metrorail doors, making it difficult for others to exit or enter promptly. (METRO) age or odd, unusual behavior that is reported" to authorities.

Asato said riders are "bombarded with a lot of messages" and that Metro sees the unusual signs as a way to get their attention amid the other ads, iPods and newspapers competing for attention.

The ads are dubbed "sniglets," a word invented by comedian Rich Hall to describe words that should be in the dictionary but aren't.

The campaign was created by the LM&O advertising agency, which has a $1.73 million contract this year with Metro.

This is not the first time Metro has used humor to get a message across. Last December, the transit agency began a campaign to discourage eating and drinking in the system.

One sign with a large picture of a cockroach has the slogan, "If we let people eat and drink on the train, we'd get a lot of new riders."

THERE COMES A TIME IN EVERYONE'S life when he or she must eliminate the following from their decor: plastic milk crates, unframed posters and string lights. West Elm, in the new Tyson's expansion, aims to help with solid basics and friendly (if not entirely settled) service.

STYLE: West Elm's furniture is of the Inoffensive Contemporary Yuppie school, but that's a plus — the styles are simple enough that adding your own personal touches is easy. The accessories are where you can play with the look. Some pillows have spangles and sequins for a more boho vibe, wicker baskets bring a touch of the country, and dark wood accessories lend an Asian flair.

PRICE: You can easily find yourself a little treat, like a cool mod teapot for $16 or a round suede pillow for $19. Bigger pieces hang out between IKEA and Pottery Barn.

SERVICE: Glitchy. Staffers are all nice — they're just new. A bit more attention on the floor would be appreciated; while looking at couches, I gave out every International Retail Sign for interest—I looked at the couch, stroked the couch, sat on the couch, lay on the couch, but no one was interested in my couch love. Once I grabbed a staffer, she assured me they keep nearly everything in stock, and that delivery was Blistex's new LIP INFUSION ($2.50) boasts a compelling deodorant-style rolling applicator, lots of lanolin (a grease secreted from sheep and other woolly creatures), jojoba oil, and an olive oil derivative. No wonder it's so oily (and a tad bit glossy, too). We found this product confirmed everything we'd ever heard about lip balm's addictive properties. If you're not already a balm junkie, you will be. Please Stop ... Dressing Against Type on Halloween A Marilyn Monroe dress cannot make you something you're not — namely, a voluptuous bombshell, says Claassen. "Marilyn was hippy. Marilyn had curves. Don't wear a dress that pronounces your hips and boobs if you don't have them." The famed dress from "Seven-Year Itch" is a particular troublemaker, he notes; if you're dead set on Marilyn, you could try the sequined gown from "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes." Better yet, come up with a fresh, figure-appropriate idea. CHRIS MINCHER (EXPRESS)

Can't Stop The Snooping

I've been dating a guy for two months. Things got pretty intense and committed in the beginning; we have a lot in common and could talk for hours and hours, so we got to know each other quickly. I seem to be in the midst of the best relationship I've ever had. Yet, on two occasions I've found myself going through his wallet and cell phone, as if I'm going to find evidence he's cheating on me. I've done this with nearly every guy I've dated and, although I'm very embarrassed (and usually find nothing incriminating) I can't seem to stop. What gives? —

ASHAMED IN MD.

Because you're having a difficult time trusting your boyfriend, you decide to give him reason not to trust you.

Though it can be normal in the beginning of an exciting relationship to have fleeting thoughts of "this is too good to be true; clearly he must be wanted in at least seven states," to violate someone's privacy for no good reason (and there are very few good reasons) says more about the snooper than it does the snoopee. I urge you to take this as an opportunity to find out where your discomfort, fears and self-doubt come from. Common culprits include "I don't deserve a trustworthy man," "so-and-so (dad, first boyfriend, grandpa, Jude Law) cheated, therefore all men do," "nothing in life is ever as good as it seems, so I might as well not get my hopes up" or the ever-popular "I'm not pretty/thin/funny/well-versed in Kafka enough to keep a man interested."

When you believe in yourself enough to realize that a seemingly good man who seemingly wants to be exclusive with you could be a truly good man who truly wants to be exclusive with you, you'll be ready to kiss those urges goodbye. The self-exploration process could really be helped by a few sessions with a counselor; it doesn't mean you're screwed up, but it does mean you'll get to know yourself a lot better and find out what the problem is.

I share an office with someone whose religious beliefs prohibit her from eating during the day for the next 30 days. I find it awkward when I bring my lunch into the room and she is obviously starving. I feel I'm being rude even though I've asked her if I'm bothering her and she said no. —LUNCHTIME DILEMMA, D.C. AREA

You've done the considerate thing by checking it out with her, so now you can proceed on your merry way. To minimize the awkwardness, try to make these next weeks' lunches as low-key and as nonintrusive as possible (think cold, simple brown-bags rather than five-course take-out spreads and groans of pleasure as you slurp them down).

Thanks a Lot, Columbus

IT IS AMAZING HOW PEOPLE continue to believe that Columbus did us a favor (Letters, Oct. 18) by killing the Native Americans so that they could bring Africans to the "new" land to become slaves. What did Columbus discover beyond the wealth and new resources Europeans could take from others and consider their own? It is sad people still believe the lies they learned in school about Columbus and expect others to do the same.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) You’ll have a good time today if you allow yourself to enjoy what relatives have to offer. Your attitude at the outset will make the difference.

mood for a replay? Something that happened over the weekend is worth experiencing all over again, as if for the first time.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) In your desire to tend to solitary issues, don’t come off as aloof or even rude. Always be polite, even when refusing invitations.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You may find yourself in a strange phase characterized by misinterpretation of the simplest instructions. Avoid lasting, costly errors.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You may have to come up with an alternate plan on the spot if your first choice doesn’t wash. Make sure you have freedom to experiment.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You may have to compromise on taste today, as the option you consider the best may not be available. Still, you can satisfy yourself by day’s end.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Your frustration may stem from the fact that you are being asked to do something that is virtually impossible and certainly unwise.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) It may be tough going, but a mutual triumph is in store for you and a friend when you become willing to work closely together in support of a common cause.

Fantasia Backlash Begins

A High Point, N.C., couple wants signs promoting FANTASIA BARRINO removed because they think her new autobiography portrays the city negatively. Kyle Sandler, 29, and Jennifer English, 26, have created a Web site to counter the book's descriptions. "I can see people driving in ... saying, 'Ha ha ha. Fantasia hates them but look at the signs saying 'Welcome to High Point, home of Fantasia Barrino,'" Sandler said. (AP)

Enough, Dude

RICHARD BRANSON got a thunder-and-lightning show second to none for the opening of his newest Virgin Megastore, in Los Angeles. Unfortunately, Monday's storm was so dynamic, it forced the British daredevil tycoon to cancel plans to rappel from the side of the three-story Hollywood complex. However, he did make sure the show went on in some fashion. Branson paraded onto a small stage with more than a dozen of his employees, all dressed like Guns N' Roses frontman Axl Rose. (AP)

MADONNA surprised Hunter College students who had just seen an advance screening of her tour documentary, "I'm Going to Tell You a Secret" on Tuesday. A Los Angeles judge has reinstated TOM SIZEMORE's probation, praising him for making "remarkable" progress in his battle with drugs. The actor's probation, stemming from a conviction last October for methamphetamine possession, was revoked in July. Sizemore has been living at a Pasadena drug treatment facility since early July. He'll continue outpatient treatment there three days a week, said Michael Rovell, one of his attorneys. (AP)

Next Weekend: 30th Annual Marine Corps Marathon, MCM8K and Healthy Kids Fun Run

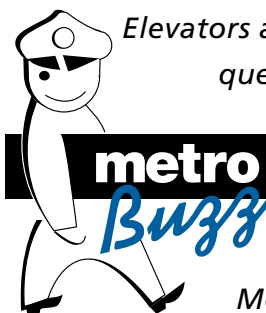

On Sunday, October 30, Metro will open at 5 a.m. to start carrying runners, support staff, family and fans to Arlington, VA, for activities associated with the Marine Corps Marathon. To celebrate the 30th annual running of this race, Marathon officials this year accepted 30,000 runners. Opening ceremonies start at 7:45 a.m., and the first wave of runners will cross the start line at 8:15 a.m. The start line is near the intersection of Route 110 and Marshall Drive, down the hill from the Marine Corps War Memorial (a.k.a. the Iwo Jima Monument).

For a great place to watch your runner on race day, check out the Crystal City Street Spectacular along Crystal Drive from 9 a.m. until 3:30 p.m. The family-friendly fall festival features a variety of activities including a rock climbing wall, belly bounce, and arts and crafts activities! Cheer runners along mile 22 and 23 of the course while enjoying music from radio stations BIG 100 and 97.1 WASH-FM, live entertainment from local bands and food from Crystal Drive restaurants. Free parking is available in the parking garage at Crystal Drive and 23rd St. Metro: Blue or Yellow Line to Crystal City. Or use Metro to follow your runner along the race route throughout the day.

For more information, visit marinemarathon.com.

METRO TIP

Heading out to Adams Morgan for the night? Take Metrobus! You can get from Capitol Hill to Adams Morgan in 20 minutes or less on the 90, 92, 93 and 96 bus lines. And you don't have to worry about finding a place to park.

Elevators and escalators are among the most frequent topics of questions that Metro customers ask us. Many have never heard of Metro's long-term Elevator and Escalator Rehabilitation Program. The program, which began in 2000, includes the rehabilitation of Metro's oldest and worst performing escalators — 178 in all. To date, Metro has rehabilitated 169 of these, including one at Silver Spring Metrorail station that will re-enter service this week.

The remaining nine escalators should be completed by the end of this year. In addition, Metro has modernized 21 elevators throughout the Metro system and will complete another 54 modernizations by 2008. We are working hard to minimize inconvenience to customers as we work to improve your Metrorail system in the long run by making it safer and easier to use. Meanwhile, you can check the current status of escalators and elevators at any station by visiting MetroOpensDoors.com.
